To Whom It May Concern,

I have two passions in life. The first is debating and learning IT. The second is working with people to help them create as well. I cannot help but think the opportunity to become an ICT Teacher at SAARC International College is the perfect place for me. My love of IT started at a very young age. I was constantly drawing, painting, sewing, and frankly, ruining. Not all art generated by a child is going to be beneficial! But from staining a few too many surfaces at my parents' house, I grew passionate about my skills.

Teaching wasn't immediately on my radar, but it soon followed. I honed my craft while simultaneously expanding my horizons. A love of IT grew into a love of helping others with their knowledge, and eventually, teaching others.

After graduation, I worked as a coach for a IT Center in town. All students were from class 11 and 12, which actually worked to my benefit. I learned the different patterns necessary to teach students of all skill levels. And just because someone is more skilled does not mean they are more advanced in a specific technique or craft. The balance aided me greatly as I moved to working exclusively with them.

Even students have vastly different learning curves. And finding each student's learning technique is part of the fun. Seeing a young child create a piece of device after hardly knowing the first step to doing so is a joy that cannot be matched. Becoming an ICT/IT Teacher at SAARC International College would stoke this joy, and I would love to be considered for the position.

Sincerely,

Md. Amran
